Nat Goodwin and William H. Crane Coming With New Plays Next Week

One Has "The Easterner," by George Broadhurst, the Other George Ade's Latest Comedy, "Father and the Boys" - Dustin Farnum Will Be Seen in "The Rector's Garden."

WITH three leading American actors in new plays and a Russian actress striking out upon the path made by Mme. Nazimova, the coming week at the theatres promises to be more than ordinarily interesting. Nat C. Goodwin has at last found a play which enables him to cast aside old repertory, and George Broadhurt believes he has fitted the comedian in "The Easterner," which will be seen at the Garrick on Monday night. Mr. Goodwin will have the role of a deputy she iff who sacrifices himself temporarily for the brother of the girl he loves. The scene is laid in the West. Mr. Go d win's support will include Edna Good-rich, Lucile Le Verne, Diva Marolda. Rene Kelly, Justina Wayne, Henry

Ade. Mr. Crane appears in the part of a New York business man who in his dealings with people betrays traces of his early training on a farm, earning for himself a reputation for close-fistedness. The comedy shows how the old
